White fellow, you are the unhappy race. You
alone have left nature
and made civilized
laws. You have enslaved yourselves as you enslaved the horse
and other wild things.
Why, white man? Your police lock up your tribe in houses with bars, We see poor
women scrubbing
floors of richer women.
Why, white man, why?

“The Unhappy Race” is a poem about rejection and how the white people want the black people to be with them, but the black people reject and say no. They don't want to work with them, the white people are doing cruel things to people and the Aboriginals don't want to be like that. “White fellows” enslaved horses, their own people.

The poem takes the reader through a journey and emphasises points and ideas throughout with different techniques such as metaphors, similes, symbols. The first verse is all about setting the scene, of a man unhappy with himself and feeling stuck. The first three lines are about him rejecting the world and his life.
