The Writers Diary Dostoevsky

A Writer's Diary (Russian: Дневник писателя; Dnevnik pisatelya) is a collection of non-fiction and fictional writings by Fyodor Dostoyevsky. Taken from pieces written for a periodical which he founded and produced, it is normally published in two volumes: the first covering those published between 1873 and 1876, the second from 1877 and 1881.

A Writer's Diary - Wikipedia

A Writer's Diary began as a column in a literary journal, but by 1876 Dostoevsky was able to bring it out as a complete monthly publication with himself as an editor, publisher, and sole contributor, suspending work on The Brothers Karamazov to do so.

Review: A Writer's Diary by Fyodor Dostoevsky, Volume 1 (1873-1876) I'm almost tempted to say that Dostoevsky became the first blogger when he decided to publish a monthly diary, paid for by subscriptions, in 1873. This literary experiment includes everything from letters, literary battles, and short stories to fragments of poems, recollections and long polemics focused on Russia's system of justice (which had undergone a substantial reform in the previous decade.)

Dostoevsky does not hold back when expressing his opinions, and at times there might appear to be a rather hazy line between the unabashed genius/prophet seeking to rouse and inspire his compatriots, and the fanatic who can't see beyond his own fixed ideas, which is a bit of a paradox for those who admire the depth of humanity found in his fiction.

Excellent introduction of Dostoevsky's style compared to literary expectations of other writers of earlier or same age. However, the chapters are filled with contemporary references to Russian life, more like a newspaper commentary of the author's surrounding; also included are lots of sociological insights.
